LEDs: Lighting-Up Edison's Light Bulb The use of light-emitting diodes (LEDs) as a light source has for years been the stuff of science fiction. The use of light-emitting diodes (LEDs) as a light source has for years been the stuff of science fiction. But now we're living in a world where LEDs are everywhere: in cellphones, cameras, projectors, automobiles, and TVs to name a few. Not surprisingly, as LED devices have become more common and the technology has improved, LED costs have dropped dramatically. For example, the cost of a compact fluorescent lamp (CFL) in the U.S. is roughly $10, while a typical 60-watt, 3.4-light-hour compact, incandescent light bulb costs $2-$3. This is true even as CFLs consume about three times as much energy. The change over to LEDs has been dramatic. For the last few years, LED light use has increased by several fold. For the fourth quarter of 2008, LED use increased by 15%, while CFL use declined by 13%. In the first quarter of 2010, LED use in the U.S. was up 15% to roughly 16% of U.S. lighting overall. The growth is expected to continue. In 2010, the LED industry expects to drive growth of from 9% to 15% per year through 2018, as the lighting industry moves to a sustainable, environmentally friendly light source. Consumers are embracing LED technology, whether it's in compact fluorescent lamps or more traditional incandescent bulbs. Why the Shift? The adoption of LEDs, coupled with new power-saving technologies, has been the biggest driver of the change. In fact, only 10% of lighting is currently LED, though this is increasing rapidly. Why is this happening? Energy efficiency and the drop in costs are a big part of it. Thanks to improvements in LED design, as well as better lamination and more efficient packaging, the cost of LEDs has dropped by two-thirds in just the last decade. The continued decline of costs allows manufacturers to compete directly with traditional light bulbs, and increased efficiency is a critical factor in the changes we've seen in the past year. The ratio of technology costs to consumer
